Temporary Guardianship

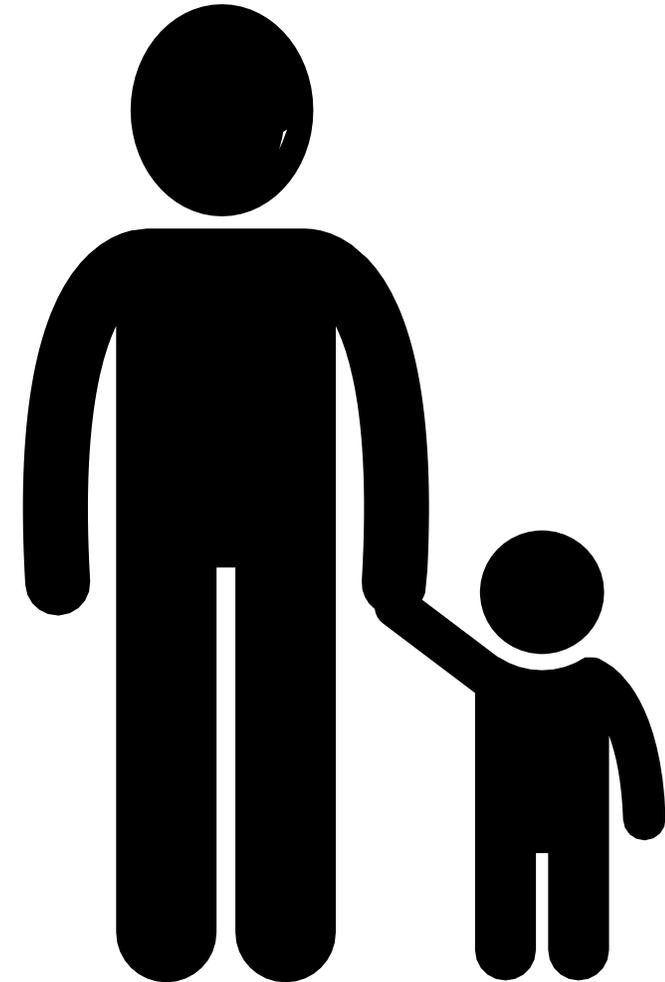

MORAN CENTER
for YOUTH ADVOCACY

— JUSTICE CHANGES EVERYTHING —

What is a guardian?

- Guardianship is a legal tool parents can use to give temporary, daily parental rights and responsibilities over a child to another adult.
- Guardianship does NOT terminate parental rights.
- Short-term guardianship can be done out of court, without an attorney, and lasts for one year.
- Permanent guardianship is ordered by a judge and remains in effect until the judge orders its end.

What are a guardian's responsibilities?

A guardian must agree to carry out the family's safety plan and maintain the child's essential needs and care.

- Ensure that the child receives:
 - Medical care
 - Education
 - Food
 - Housing
 - Clothing
 - Caretaking of the child's physical, mental, and emotional needs

Who can be a guardian?

A guardian should be someone that the family can trust and ideally has a relationship with the child.

Requirements:

- Adult (18+ years old)
- Consent to guardianship
- Reside in the United States (preferably with legal status) Mental capacity (of sound mind)
- No felony convictions
- No convictions for crimes that resulted in harm or threat to a child including sexual abuse

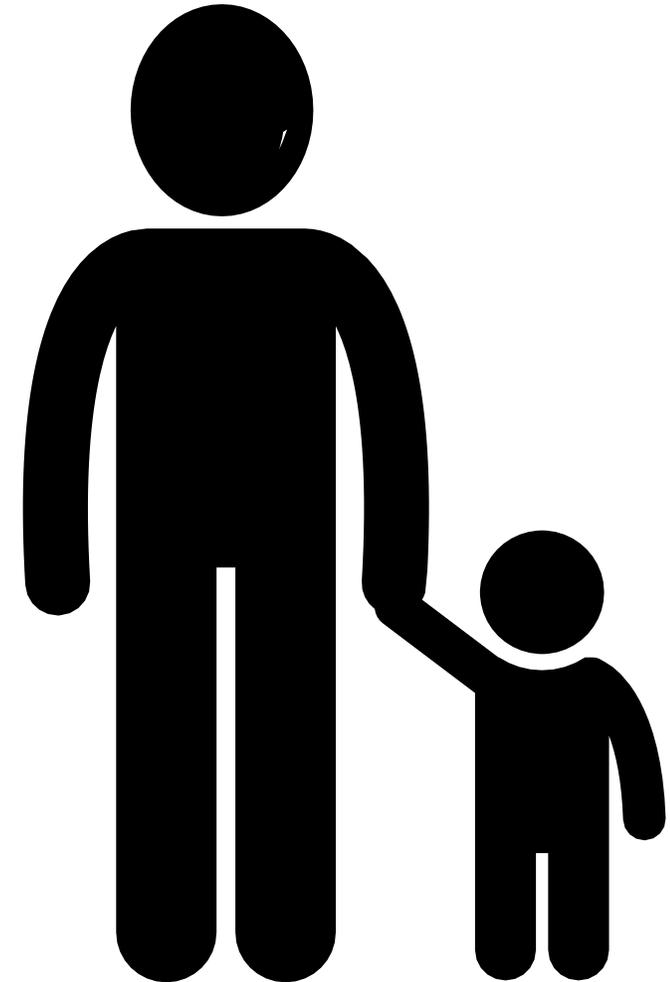

What is temporary guardianship?

The Illinois-specific Temporary Guardianship form designates who will care for children under the age of 18 if their parents are unable to engage in daily parenting duties such as of detention or deportation.

Signatures are needed from one parent, two witnesses, and the designated guardian.

Families should ensure the completed form is

- Filed with the child's school.
- Given to the designated guardian.
- Stored securely with other documents.

Temporary Guardianship

PROS:

- No court or lawyer needed
- Can last up to 365 days
- Can go into effect due to a specific event (detention or deportation, for example)
- Can be terminated at any time
- Easy and flexible
- Does NOT need to be notarized

CONS:

- Guardians may have issues with getting some public benefits for the child
- Renew one year after the effective date
- If only one parent signs the short-term guardianship, the other parent can revoke the document at any time
